

Forbes In Good Company: Empowering Today's Female Millennials to Become Tomorrow's CEOs

fwa.org/spotlight/forbes-in-good-company-empowering-todays-female-millennials-to-become-tomorrows-ceos/

The Financial Women's Association was featured in the December "2017 Investment Guide" of Forbes Magazine – "In Good Company: Empowering Today's Female Millennials to Become Tomorrow's CEOs." The report features how the FWA is paving the way for future leaders by offering a rich array of professional development; enhanced the role of women in finance with mentoring programs; provides recent innovations such as the Pacesetters leadership development and mentoring programs for Millennials; and the Back2Business program, which provides a pathway for those who took a hiatus from their professional life but wish to restart and reestablish their careers.

The article will be distributed by Forbes at the World Economic Forum at Davos in January 2017.

The image shows the cover of a Forbes report titled "IN GOOD Company" with the subtitle "Empowering Today's Female Millennials to Become Tomorrow's CEOs". The cover features three photographs of women in professional settings. The text on the cover includes a quote from Robin Dambrot, FWA President: "Millennial women want to be engaged in their organizations and are passionate about their success!". The FWA logo is visible in the bottom right corner of the report cover.

Click to display report